

WELCOME TO HUMANITIES

Now that you've chosen to come to McMaster to study Humanities, you are probably wondering what to do next – in particular, how to choose your courses.

A full course load includes 30 units, or 15 units each term. Each course you take is typically worth 3 (one semester) or 6 (two semesters) units. Which courses you should take depends on what program(s) you think you might want to enter in Level 2.

You are required to take 12 units from what is called Course List 1 – these are the courses that qualify you for a program in second year. Then you get to fill the remaining 18 units with additional courses from this list, Humanities electives, or electives from other faculties.

We've provided you with a worksheet inside this brochure to help you make your choices. As always, if you have any questions, we encourage you to speak to an academic advisor.

Understanding Course Codes

The level of the course. ▶ 1AA3 ◀ How many units this course is worth.

Prerequisite: You must take this course first.

Co-requisite: You must take this course at the same time.

Anti-requisite: If you've taken the listed course, you can't take this one.

*Note: Music 1 and Studio Art 1 both have special lists of requirements. See our website for more details.

I'm giving back, I hope, to first year students, my sense of excitement that I had as a first year student.

John Weaver - Professor, History

It's thrilling to see students wrestle with what it means to be human... to tap into who we are and how we express ourselves... to be a citizen in our world.

Rachel Rensink-Hoff - Assistant Professor, Music

We are about helping students develop and articulate a vision for themselves and for the world they want to live in.

Anna Moro - Associate Dean of Humanities

The skills that you develop in this program – reading, writing, analytical skills – they are applicable to everything else you could want to do in the future.

Ashlynn Whalley - Student, Justice, Political Philosophy, and Law (JPPL)

I was... listening to someone who was so passionate about what they loved tell me about it and I just fell in love with it.

Ryan Haydon - Student, History

I love that we have these opportunities to explore our career choices, to be hands-on with our learning both in the classroom and outside the classroom.

Kristi Kwan - Student, Cognitive Science of Language

The faculty are outstanding. They really care about you individually. The students are amazing.

Elise Naccarato - Student, Music
